Honeywell Awards a Top National Sales Honor to Local Firm

Scarsdale, New York October 20, 2004 – Based in Scarsdale, New York for more than 20 years and with customers throughout 48 states, Scarsdale Security Systems Inc. has grown to become one of the nation's top 100 security companies. The company is pleased to announce that it was awarded a Top National Sales Honor at the recent First Alert Professional Conference in Miami, Florida, hosted by Honeywell Security, the supplier of First Alert Professional and Ademco brand products to thousands of security firms across the nation.

Scarsdale Security Systems is well known for its innovative use of technology, providing local residents, schools and businesses with its high reliability 'customer-first' approach to security monitoring and services. This attention to customer service has earned the company one of the highest customer service rating indicators in the nation and is one reason why the company enjoys a popular reputation with a number of large national account chains, each with hundreds of locations across the country.

Each year, Honeywell recognizes the top tier of security firms in various categories at their annual convention and at this year's event David Raizen, President and Founder of Scarsdale Security, was on hand to accept their award on behalf of the entire team. "I know everyone at Scarsdale Security is proud of this accomplishment", said David, "it took a lot of hard work, but now the race is on for next year's award!"

Scarsdale Security Systems is once again pleased to be associated with the Honeywell program which Joe Sausa, Honeywell's president of First Alert Professional and Honeywell Authorized Dealer Programs, has called "... the pre-eminent independent dealer program in the security industry...".
